<sup>3</sup> Including full time Secondary pupils. Of the pupils in Urban Schools in Ontario the continuation Schools had [9,944] pupils enrolled and 3,159 in average attendance. Of these pupils 5,311 were children of farmers, while 11,735 of the pupils in Collegiate Institutes and High Schools and 621 full time day Vocational pupils were children farmers. The continuation schools are situated in villages and may be considered as organized primarily for the purpose of placing secondary education within the reach of rural communities: ggain a large number of the children of agriculturists in Collegiate Inst. and High within the reach of rural communities: egain a large number of the children of agriculturists in Collegiate Inst. and High Schools are probably from adjoining rural communities and not necessarily boarding away from home in the towns and cities where these institutions are situated. The same may be said of the pupils in public and separate village schools, and, to some extent, in High Schools in cities. The number of pupils in these village Schools was 25,206 and in town Schools 96,179. The proportion of rural children who must be attending urban centers may be estimated from the census figures of 1921 taken in conjunction with the report of the Dept. of Education for the same year. According to the census figures, of all persons attending any schools, 42 p.c. were from rural communities. According to the report of the Dept. of Education for the same year, of all persons attending, 36 p.c. were in attendance at rural schools. Roughly therefore 6 out of 42 or over 14 p.c. of the rural pupils were in attendance in urban schools. There were also in the neighbourhood of 600 graded schools in rural centers.

<sup>3</sup> Dans les écoles urbaines de l'Ontario, les écoles de continuation ont 9,944 inscriptions avec une fréquentation moyenne ³ Dans les écoles urbaines de l'Ontario, les écoles de continuation ont 9,944 inscriptions avec une fréquentation moyenne de 8,159. De ces élèves, 5,311 étaient fils ou filles de cultivateurs, tandis que 11,735 élèves des instituts collégiaux et des hautes écoles et 621 élèves du jour dans les écoles de travaux manuels étaient aussi fils ou filles de cultivareurs. Les écoles de continuation sont dans les villages et ont pour objet essentiel de mettre l'enseignement secondaire à la portée des communautés rurales. Un grand nombre des élèves des instituts collégiaux et des hautes écoles viennent probablement des districts ruraux voisins et ne sont pas nécessairement des pensionnaires dans les villes ou les villages es trouvent les écoles. Il en est de même des écoles publiques ou séparées des villages et même des villes, et jusqu'à un certain point, dans les hautes écoles des villes. Le nombre d'élèves dans les écoles de villages et même des villes, et jusqu'à un certain point, dans les hautes écoles des villes de districts ruraux fréquentant les écoles arbaines doit être déterminée d'après le recensement de 1921 comparé avec le rapport du ministère de l'Instruction Publique de la même année. D'après le recensement de la population urbaine, 42 p.c. de tous les élèves et étudiants venaient des districts ruraux, et suivant le rapport du ministère de l'Instruction Publique, 36 p.c. de tous les élèves se trouvaient dans les écoles rurales. Or, 6 sur 42 donne un peu plus de 14 p.c. d'élèves des districts ruraux fréquentant les écoles urbaines. Il y avait aussi environ 600 écoles à classes multiples dans les centres ruraux.
